

Interactive Graphic: Explore How Patterns Of Drug Deaths Have Changed

Measuring Overdoses in Surprising Places

Overdose fatality rates in most of the Philadelphia region are well above the national average. Pennsylvania was ranked No. 8 in 2013. New Jersey's death rate was rising faster.

Death rates in Camden and Gloucester Counties now exceed the city's. And they are part of a curious pattern: Mortality rates in every South Jersey county are above the state average, while every North Jersey county is below it.
